MAY INVESTIGATE STATE'S ATTORNEY'S OFFICE AS RESULT OF NOBLE CASE DISMISSAL

The dismissal of Carlotta Noble's case against Columbus ("Jack") Cuneo, son of the millionaire fruit king, may lead to an investigation of the state's attorney's office.

This was the development today when the charge of contempt of court against Miss Noble's mother was called before Judge Gemmill in the Court of Domestic Relations.

Attorney Charles E. Erbstein appeared for the Nobles, and asked that the case dismissed last week be reopened, and that the contempt case be continued.

Assistant State's Attorney W. R. Fetzer, who managed to have the case dismissed last week, fought bitterly against any reopening of the case.

Erbstein said there were too many mysterious points involved in the case to let it drop the way it stood.

"Why," he asked, "did the assistant state's attorney who was supposed to prosecute this case so suddenly change his front and labor to have it dismissed?"

"Was there collusion between between this assistant state's attorney and the family of the defendant?"

"How was it that these two women were summoned to the trial of their case and not told that their case was to be tried?"

"Why were they not given an opportunity to call any of their witnesses, and why were they not allowed an attorney?"

Fetzer, who was in court when Erbstein was asking these questions, did not appear to have any adequate answer. He mumbled something about the public good.

The case dismissed last week was the one in which Miss Noble charged that young Cuneo was the father of her unborn child.

Only one witness was called, a city physician, who before had reported that Miss Noble was to become a mother, but who then testified she was not.

Erbstein said today that he could bring into court certificates from half a dozen reputable physicians proving that Miss Noble was to become a mother.

Judge Gemmill refused to reopen the case today, but gave Erbstein until October 3 to produce more evidence.

Erbstein later said flatly that
